

Going to the doctor, physician associate or anaesthesia associate What should happen

General
Medical Council

General Medical Council

Who we are

We are called the General Medical Council.
Or GMC for short.

We make the rules about what doctors, physician associates (PAs) and anaesthesia associates (AAs) need to do.

They all have to follow these rules.

This leaflet talks about these rules.

What this leaflet is about

This leaflet is about going to the doctor, physician associate or anaesthesia associate

It will help you know

- what should happen
- what you can do.

The care you get

Here are the things your doctor, physician associate or anaesthesia associate should do.

- Listen to what you say and what you think.

- Find out what is wrong with you. They may need to check your body to do this.

- Think about your health and what is best for you.
- Be polite and treat you in a good way.

Health staff giving you care should say who they are and how they will help.

Information about your health

Here are some things your doctor, physician associate or anaesthesia associate should do.

- Give you information in an easy way for you.
- Say what medicine or treatment you may need.

You can decide what treatment you want.

You can say no to treatment if you want.

You can talk about it together.

Ask your doctor, physician associate or anaesthesia associate if you are not sure of anything.

You can take someone with you if you like.

Your doctor, physician associate or anaesthesia associate can tell you things again if you are not sure.

You can see another doctor, physician associate or anaesthesia associate if you are not happy with what they say.

Information doctors, physician associates (PAs) and anaesthesia associates (AAs) keep about your health

Your doctor, physician associate or anaesthesia associate keeps some information about your health.

They may need to share this information with other health people, like nurses or social workers.

This is to make sure you get good care.

Everyone will keep your information safe.

But speak to your doctor, physician associate or anaesthesia associate or staff at your doctors if you are worried about this.

Keeping you safe

Doctors, physician associates or anaesthesia associates must do something if they think someone is not safe.

They must tell you if they do something wrong or if something bad happens with your care.

They have to tell some other people as well.
This is to stop the problem happening again.

Your doctor, physician associate or anaesthesia associate should say sorry if they need to.

Doctors, physician associates or anaesthesia associates should never do things like touch you in a sexual way or say sexual things to you.

Tell a doctor, nurse or other health person if

- you don't feel safe

- something went wrong, like your medicine made you very ill

- you think someone else isn't safe.

If you think your doctor, physician associate or anaesthesia associate did something wrong

You can complain. This is when you say you are not happy with your doctor, physician associate or anaesthesia associate.

You can complain at the place where you saw the them.

Ask staff there if you are not sure how to complain.

There is an easy read leaflet that tells you more about how to complain. It is on our website at www.gmc-uk.org/easyread.

If you are not sure what to do call us on 0161 923 6602.

Making sure doctors, physician associates or anaesthesia associates do their job well

Doctors, physician associates or anaesthesia associates need to follow the law and the rules we give them.

They need to do lots of checks to make sure they are doing a good job.

Sometimes your doctor, physician associate or anaesthesia associate may not be able to help you.

They may say you need to see another health person who can help you more.

There is a website for doctors, physician associates or anaesthesia associates to help them support people with a learning disability.

You can tell your doctor about it if you like.

www.gmc-uk.org/learningdisabilities

What you should do

Go to your appointments.

Or tell staff at your doctors, physician associates or anaesthesia associates if you can't go.

Tell staff if you need any support with your appointments.

Tell them everything you can about your health problem.

Be polite to your doctor, physician associate or anaesthesia associate.

Do what your doctor, physician associate or anaesthesia associate says about taking your medicine or having treatment.

Check if you are not sure about anything.

Tell staff what you think of your care. This can help your doctor, physician associate or anaesthesia associate do a better job.